Subject: Interagency Diplomatic Strategy Group

Over the next six weeks we can anticipate an intense round of diplomatic activity related to Central America with possibly substantial ramifications for U.S. policy in the region. During this period:

- The Contadora countries will be promoting their "final" draft of their proposed treaty.
- The EC/Central America Foreign Ministers meeting will take place in San Jose.
- There will be an intense round of multilateral discussions at the UNGA possibly including formal UNGA discussion/debate on the Contadora Process/Central America Peace issue.
- Our dialogue will continue with Nicaragua.
- Negotiations will continue between the Democratic opposition in Nicaragua and the Sandinistas over electoral participation.

- The Core Four countries will meet in San Jose to determine their strategy for dealing with the Contadora proposal.
- Talks between Costa Rica and Nicaragua under French sponsorship could result in agreement during this period.

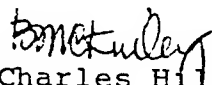

This crescendo of diplomatic activity may well be accompanied by the long anticipated military offensive in El Salvador.

During this period our diplomatic objectives will be to:

- Ensure that any Contadora agreement enacted is fully compatible with our political/security concerns.
- Prevent any agreement between Costa Rica and Nicaragua which would undermine Core Four solidarity and the Contadora process.
- Protect the U.S. from allegations that we do not favor a negotiated solution to the problems of the region.

A series of steps have already been taken to achieve these objectives. However, we can anticipate the need for a flexible policy and rapid-fire decision-making as these events unfold.

To ensure policy coordination during this period an interagency diplomatic strategy group is being established under the direction of Deputy Assistant Secretary Craig Johnstone. The NSC, CIA, DOD, and JCS are requested to appoint one representative each at a decision-making level to participate in this group.
